

Blue states were part of the Union and represent the "North."

Red states decided to form the Confederate States of America and represent the "South."

Yellow states were "border" states which means they endorsed slavery but did not elect to secede and join the confederacy.

White areas are current states that were not organized as states during the war.